1 (Case called)

2 THE DEPUTY CLERK: Counsel for SKAT, are you ready?

3 MR. WEINSTEIN: Yes. Good morning, your Honor. Marc
4 Weinstein, Bill Maguire, Sarah Cave, and Neil Oxford, from 5 Hughes Hubbard & Reed, for plaintiff.

6 THE COURT: Good morning.

7 THE DEPUTY CLERK: Defendants Bradley London Pension
8 Plan and Doston Bradley, are you ready?

9 MR. ALLISON: Yes, your Honor. Good morning. Mark
10 Allison and Zhanna Ziering, Caplin & Drysdale, on behalf of 11 them and ten other defendants.

12 THE COURT: Good morning.

13 THE DEPUTY CLERK: Defendant Sander Gerber Pension
14 Plan, are you ready?

15 MS. MCKINLAY: Yes. Good morning, your Honor. Amy
16 McKinlay and Stephen Andrews.

17 THE COURT: Good morning.

18 THE DEPUTY CLERK: Defendant Adam LaRosa, are you
19 ready?

20 MR. SPIRO: Yes. Good morning, your Honor. Edward 21 Spiro, Morvillo, Abramowitz, for Mr. LaRosa.

22 THE COURT: Good morning.

23 THE DEPUTY CLERK: Defendant Goldstein Law Group, are 24 you ready?

25 MR. KAPLAN: Yes. Good morning, your Honor. Martin

J108CUSC

1 H. Kaplan, Gusrae, Kaplan, Nusbaum, for the Goldstein
2 defendants.

3 THE COURT: Good morning.

4 THE DEPUTY CLERK: Defendant Robert Klugman, are you
5 ready?

6 MR. ALLISON: Your Honor, Mark Allison again. I am
7 here on behalf of the Klugman defendants as well.

8 THE COURT: Thank you.

9 THE DEPUTY CLERK: Defendant John Doscas, David
10 Freelow, Sterling Alpha Plan and Delmar Plan, are you ready?

11 MR. SKARLATOS: Yes, your Honor. Good morning. Bryan
12 Skarlatos and Eric Smith, Kostelanetz & Fink.

13 THE DEPUTY CLERK: Defendant Acorn Summers, et al.,
14 are you ready?

15 Mr. Hanamirian, can you hear me?

16 MR. HANAMIRIAN: Yes. It's very faint in the 17 background. I can hear the judge's voice, but the balance of 18 it is very faint.

19 THE COURT: We have had a technical malfunction here,
20 and as you may guess the reasons, nothing is getting fixed.

21 All right. There are two matters I wanted to deal
22 with this morning. One you knew about in advance, which was 23 the lead counsel matter. I have read all the correspondence.
24 I doubt very much there is anything else to be said, and I can
25 give you my views in a minute. I also want to discuss briefly

J108CUSC

1 one facet of the pending application for letters rogatory.

2 Now, so far as the lead counsel contretemps is 3 concerned, I am looking at the Caplin & Drysdale letter of 4 December 18, which I find in most respects entirely
5 appropriate. Here is the reason for the qualification, or the 6 reasons.

7 First of all, on page 2, in the second bullet point, I
8 take it what you're asking me to do is include a provision in 9 the order that would provide that communications between and 10 among lead counsel and other defendants would be privileged,
11 and that lead counsel can't waive any privileges without the 12 consent of all.

13 I know where you're coming from, of course. This is a
14 matter that is normally handled by a joint defense agreement,
15 and I don't know that I have the authority to sprinkle holy 16 water on something and make it so. So I suggest you handle it
17 in the traditional way and not in the order.

18 Anybody have a problem with that?

19 MR. ALLISON: Your Honor, may I?

20 THE COURT: Yes.

21 MR. ALLISON: Thank you, your Honor.

22 With regard to the privileged communications,
23 obviously you're right. We certainly understand that that is 24 something that should be addressed and worked out sort of among 25 counsel. For reasons that are probably obvious from the

J108CUSC

1 correspondence we have had, that may or may not be a workable
2 solution. And we have already had one reference to a
3 communication that we did not want disclosed. No particular
4 harm done, I don't think, but I am obviously very sensitive to 5 it.

6 We would like to at least have an understanding that 7 any communications within that group, whether or not they are 8 described as privileged, should remain within the group.
9 Obviously, we can work out the characterization of them as 10 privileged, but we still think it's important that we be able 11 to have frank conversations, whether or not they are 12 privileged.

13 THE COURT: That's probably true, but you are going to 14 have to work that out. If there is somebody who, one number of 15 defendants, finds doesn't respect confidences, I imagine they 16 will come to the point where they don't impart any.

17 MR. ALLISON: I think that the rub is that part of 18 what I have been trying to do, of course, is have discussions,
19 for example, with plaintiff's counsel, relay that back
20 obviously to the defense group. Sometimes it's necessary to 21 provide some context and color, and sometimes some views. If I
22 can't do any of that, then what I am left with is a very bare
23 bones, rather meaningless communication, followed up by a
24 separate privileged communication with those who would follow
25 it. But maybe that's the answer, your Honor.

J108CUSC

1 THE COURT: Yes. The long and short of it is that I
2 am not sure how I can solve that problem for you. It may well
3 be that in the fullness of time everybody will understand that
4 they have a common interest, at least to that extent. But I
5 can't force that down anybody's throats, at least at this 6 moment.

7 The fourth bullet point, of course, in appropriate
8 circumstances, I could issue a gag order, but I don't think we 9 are there. So I don't propose to do it now.

10 Moving down the page, the third bullet point under 11 discovery matters, if I understand this correctly, what you're 12 proposing is that the responses and objections to the 13 plaintiff's discovery will be prepared and served separately by 14 counsel for each of the 140-plus defendants in this case. That 15 is not acceptable. Obviously, to the extent there are 16 differences of position, those need to be respected, but I
17 expect that, to the extent you can agree on objections to 18 discovery requests that are common to multiple defendants,
19 there will be one set of common objections on behalf of those 20 who go along with them.

21 MR. ALLISON: May I, your Honor?

22 THE COURT: Yes, of course.

23 MR. ALLISON: So as a practical matter, what has been 24 happening, as far as I can tell, obviously we represent, Caplin
25 & Drysdale represent 110 or so defendants. Obviously, there

J108CUSC

1 was a single filing on behalf of those. We served objections
2 on behalf of those 110 together. As far as I could tell,
3 generally speaking, the other objections, maybe with one or two
4 exceptions, have been consistent, and the meet-and-confer that 5 we have done with plaintiff has been on behalf of all the 6 defendants, regardless of their separate objections.

7 The problem has been -- and Mr. Hanamirian raised
8 this, and it's something I will at least agree with -- that 9 there are potentially unique defenses, unique objections, that 10 obviously I wouldn't have the ability as lead counsel to 11 marshal and determine, and Mr. Hanamirian or others may not 12 feel comfortable sharing that information directly with me.

13 I respect that, and I also would feel uncomfortable,
14 obviously, asserting objections and defenses on behalf of 15 defendants who I don't represent and who I don't know. And 16 that's been a rub. I will obviously defer to plaintiff's
17 counsel as to whether there has been a problem with that as a
18 process matter, but I have not sort of picked up on any 19 specific issues there.

20 THE COURT: There are a couple of different ways in 21 which this could arise. One way it could arise is that the 22 plaintiff serve, for the sake of argument, a common set of 23 interrogatories on all defendants.

24 Now, in those circumstances, there should be one set
25 of responses and objections on behalf of all of the defendants,

J108CUSC

1 to the extent they are asserting the same objections and
2 defenses. And then if it's necessary for one or more
3 defendants to supplement with a filing unique to themselves,
4 fine. All right. But the paper in this case could take down
5 half of the forest of the western United States on any other
6 basis.

7 So that's my intention, and I think you need to 8 fine-tune this language.

9 Next point, with respect to depositions, I think there
10 is a difference here between depositions of the plaintiff,
11 depositions of nonparty witnesses, and depositions of 12 defendants, and they are not all the same. Obviously, if the 13 plaintiffs are taking a deposition of defendant number 97, I
14 would expect that the lead role in defending a deposition will 15 be by the lawyer for defendant 97. And then whatever 16 arrangements all the other defendants want to make to have the 17 deposition covered, if they want it covered, they will make.
18 It could be that Mr. Allison will cover it for everybody else,
19 or it may be some permutation. Then there are depositions
20 conducted by defendants.

21 Now, to the extent more than one defendant wants a
22 deposition of John Jones, or the plaintiff, there is going to 23 be one deposition of that witness. And unless you otherwise
24 agree, the lead at that deposition will be lead counsel.
25 You're free to agree otherwise. But whoever has the lead is

J108CUSC

1 the principal examiner, and if there then needs to be
2 follow-up, not repetition, but follow-up to protect positions
3 by individual defendants, fine. Nothing unusual about that.

4 And I think that pretty much covers my concerns about 5 this.

6 Now, Mr. Hanamirian, I read your exceptionally long
7 and repetitious letters, and my overall impression was that my 8 reading of the proposal that came from Caplin & Drysdale and 9 yours were based on having read two different documents. I
10 just essentially couldn't figure out what you were talking
11 about, to be perfectly blunt.

12 MR. HANAMIRIAN: In that context, I think that I am
13 obviously, for lack of a better phrase, the problem. Would the 14 Court entertain or would it be helpful to the Court if we 15 sever?

16 THE COURT: No. That's not going to happen. I
17 already ruled on that, in effect, and the multi-district panel
18 already ruled on that, in effect. This is a consolidated
19 pretrial proceeding and you're in it, whether you like it or 20 not.

21 OK. I think that takes care of all of that.

22 I don't mean to suggest, Mr. Hanamirian, that the 23 individual rights or positions of your clients won't be 24 respected. They will. But you're going to have to work to 25 avoid repetitious, needless divergence, and piles of

J108CUSC

1 unnecessary papers. To the extent there are common positions,
2 you are going to work with everybody else.

3 OK. Now, the letters rogatory. The reason I haven't
4 signed them yet is because I was waiting for today.

5 My recollection of the order, which I am frank to say
6 I haven't looked at since last month, is that there is a
7 provision in it in which I am asked, in effect, to certify to 8 the Danish authorities that this request is not for discovery
9 purposes. And I infer that the reason for that is because 10 Denmark acceded to the Hague Evidence Convention with the 11 reservation opting out of executing these requests for the 12 purpose of discovery.

13 Am I right Mr. Allison?

14 MR. ALLISON: I have to defer actually to the 15 plaintiff on that.

16 THE COURT: Yes. It's the plaintiff's letters.

17 Mr. Weinstein.

18 MR. WEINSTEIN: I am trying to find that specific 19 provision, your Honor. There is a concern about how European 20 countries address Hague requests and that there may be 21 different standards.

22 THE COURT: It's true that it's common to many 23 European countries, but the key point is that Denmark has such 24 a reservation, as I understand it, as does the U.K. I just 25 happen to know that.

J108CUSC

1 MR. WEINSTEIN: I think the law in U.K. is clearer on
2 that issue. But if the question is whether Denmark is subject
3 to the Hague on this, the answer is yes.

4 THE COURT: I'm sorry. If the question is?

5 MR. WEINSTEIN: If Denmark is --

6 THE COURT: They are one of the opt-outs, right?

7 MR. WEINSTEIN: We think so, yes.

8 THE COURT: So before I sign these, I would like to 9 have a written showing from the plaintiff, if you can 10 legitimately make it, as to how this is trial evidence, not 11 discovery. I think it would be useful also, in the 12 alternative, to address the question of whether the request
13 must be made under the Hague Evidence Convention as opposed to 14 being what I will call, for want of a better term, simply a 15 common law letter rogatory to the relevant authorities in 16 Denmark, which need not address the issue of discovery, at 17 least by me. Because one certainly sees requests like that 18 from time to time.

19 So I just want to be sure that I am not certifying
20 something, without a basis for doing so, to the Danish courts.

21 MR. WEINSTEIN: Understood.

22 THE COURT: All right. Anything else, folks?

23 MR. BLESSINGTON: If I may, we filed an opposition to 24 the request --

25 THE COURT: Forget it.

J108CUSC

MR. BLESSINGTON: I thought it was worth a try.

THE COURT: Well, maybe not.

Anything else? I have a jury waiting in another case.

MR. WEINSTEIN: May I raise two quick issues?

One, with respect to the lead counsel determination, we had submitted a letter, your Honor, on one particular provision.

THE COURT: Oh, yes. Do you really have any problem with that, Mr. Allison?

MR. ALLISON: No, not at all. But I don't know that the other defense counsel have weighed in on that particular provision.

THE COURT: Well, you know they have had Mr. Weinstein's letter.

So you should be submitting to me in the form of a proposed order, reflecting the points I have made today, what you propose I sign, along with some electronic medium with Word Perfect format so I can tinker with it if I need to do that, and I will get that entered soon.

MR. WEINSTEIN: Second issue, your Honor, we wanted to give your Honor a heads-up because we don't know when the next conference might be scheduled. There is a distinct possibility that we will be filing significantly more actions related to those that are now before you.

THE COURT: Because the government needs the money.

J108CUSC

1 MR. WEINSTEIN: There has been long-standing
2 settlement negotiations with another group of plans. We are 3 talking about over 100. There had been a tolling agreement in 4 place that has now expired, although there was a provision in 5 which the tolling effect doesn't end until the end of February.
6 So I believe those decisions will be made by the end of 7 February. But that could mean another 100 or so cases in front
8 of your Honor related to this.

9 THE COURT: My first MDL we had 1200 cases. So I am
10 not frightened off yet.

11 MR. WEINSTEIN: I am pretty sure we will remain well
12 below your record.

13 THE COURT: OK. Thanks, folks.
